

What's a liege waffle?

Unlike the waffles you make at home, liege waffles are made from a brioche-like dough - not a batter! Once risen, chunks of pearl sugar are mixed into the dough. When pressed in our imported waffle iron the sugar caramelizes on the outside while leaving some intact, giving you that sweet crunch.

Liege waffles are not typically eaten with syrup! In Belgium, they are mostly eaten on the go with your hands - similar to America's donut. While we try to keep it as authentic as we can, we understand still needing that taste of sweet syrup! That's why we offer our housemade maple butter
